the passive construction in dutch represents a long standing problem both in linguistics and in written communications this book proposes a new analysis of the passive in dutch integrating insights from theoretical especially cognitive linguistics and rhetoric composition the point of departure is the observation that the dutch passive has a demonstrable perspective effect in texts the passive discourages identification with the agent and this in fact is the meaning of the dutch passive construction this meaning forms the basis for a solution to a number of text problems including the problem of how to best use the passive in computer manuals we can also understand the passive s role in specific texts for example it becomes clear why policy paper writers use so many passives finally in one of the case studies it is shown why passives were used differently in the nrc handelsblad a rotterdam daily newspaper and in the parool from amsterdam when they both reported that ajax amsterdam s football team became the national soccer champion master s thesis from the year 2008 in the subject environmental sciences grade passed assumption university of thailand college of internet distance education cide school of business administration course master thesis project 100 entries in the bibliography language english abstract this thesis presents a research project entitled a hypothetical enhanced renewable energy utilization ereu model for electricity generation in thailand this research is motivated by thailand s rapidly increasing electricity consumption caused by the country s long standing above average economic growth consequently the rising electricity demand can only be satisfied by continuously growing electricity imports and thus creating a significant burden to thailand s national budget further more thailand is heavily dependent on natural gas reserves for electricity generation however these are expected to be depleted within only three decades and global price levels for conventional fuels are increasingly volatile with an ascending tendency as well therefore thailand faces an urgent need to strategically plan for the broad utilization of domestic renewable energy resources which is essential for a more diversified and thus sustainable electricity generation as well as for the nation's endeavor to become an energy hub within the south east asian region under these circumstances this research conducts a comprehensive literature review regarding the past development as well as the current situation of renewable energy utilization in thailand which concludes in the identification of the importance of renewable energy in the given context and closes with both a distinctive need assessment and a conceptual framework for thailand's future renewable energy strategy subsequently the research introduces a unique primary research endeavor in the form of an explorative expert interview survey which succeeds in a substantial collection of qualitative and in depth data these valuable data is first objectively analyzed and second subjectively interpreted and summarized to become the major source for the derivation of a multitude of potential strategic recommendations for an enhanced future renewable energy utilization development in thailand finally the entirety of these recommended strategic approaches based on both the secondary and primary research are assembled to develop the enhanced renewable energy utilization model for electricity generation in thailand as the fundamental finding of this thesis and research project respectively this book explains some of the psychological processes that go into narrative construction and why it is that we have so much variability of historical accounts about a single historical event a central focus of this book is how historians go from having unconnected units of data to having a coherent structured and organized flow of experiences the author argues that the way these connections are established responds to certain gestalt psychological principles that allow us to understand not only how histories are constructed but also how this construction can be rather different depending on how these principles are applied to illustrate how these principles are present in histories the author analyzes classic historical writers such as burckhardt huizinga vico and marx as well as an explanation of why historical multiplicity happens the book also offers a way to evaluate different historical narratives about the same historical event to illustrate how the evaluative framework is at play the author analyzes two views about the so called discovery of america the first one explains what happens in 1492 by using the term discovery the second one uses the notion of invention to talk about the same set of circumstances the book provides an important epistemic tool to evaluate these different accounts one that can be applied not only to this case but also others this book appeals to scholars graduate students and upper level undergraduate students of history and philosophy in addition the book may also attract intellectuals generally considered who are interested in how philosophy can inform and question historical practice patients often are asked to fill out questionnaires before or after going to the doctor's office or hospital. What is the point of these questionnaires? Why do the questions often seem irrelevant? Does it matter if patients fill them out or ignore them? This book addresses these questions while also providing historical context about how these questionnaires became so popular. These questionnaires, which philosopher Leah M. McClimans calls patient-centered measures, have a fascinating history that combines the contemporary emphasis in medical ethics on patient-centered care with the contemporary preoccupation with evidence-based medicine. The idea that medical decisions should be based on empirical evidence, patient-centered measures sit between these two concerns and thus serve as an excellent example of a medical technology for the twenty-first century.
