spontaneous and creative protest movements have burst onto the political stage in canada and around the world joel d harden an activist writer and educator offers a ground level account of the most important of these recent expressions of large scale political engagement mostly by young people based on first hand accounts from many of the participants and organizers harden describes key events and turning points in canada and beyond from the viewpoint of a committed insider harden believes that these new bottom up movements are the most challenging and effective agent of political change on the scene today galvanizing people to express their views actively in the streets and parks or in their workplaces the political and corporate power structure has been shaken by these challenges sometimes enough to generate real political change political analysts journalists and academics have not yet come to terms with this new activism harden briefly reviews theories that fail to capture its essence and those that come close to getting it in a concluding chapter addressed to students and participants in these social movements he offers his own take on a movement relevant theory informed by his own considerable experience as a widely respected canadian activist this book offers new thinking about how ordinary citizens particularly young people have started to take back power in our democracy and change the world new york times editors choice an elegantly argued and exuberantly narrated the new york times book review look at the building of social movements from the 1600s to the present and how current technology is undermining them a bravura work of scholarship and reporting featuring amazing individuals and dramatic events from seventeenth century france to rome moscow cairo and contemporary minneapolis louis menand author of the free world we tend to think of revolutions as loud frustrations and demands shouted in the streets but the ideas fueling them have traditionally been conceived in much quieter spaces in the small secluded corners where a vanguard can whisper among themselves imagine alternate realities and deliberate about how to achieve their goals this extraordinary book is a search for those spaces over centuries and across continents and a warning that in a world dominated by social media they might soon go extinct gal beckerman an editor at the new york times book review takes us back to the seventeenth century to the correspondence that jump started the scientific revolution and then forward through time to examine engines of social change the petitions that secured the right to vote in 1830s britain the zines that gave voice to women's rage in the early 1990s and even the messaging apps used by epidemiologists fighting the pandemic in the shadow of an inept administration in each case beckerman shows that our most defining social movements from decolonization to feminism were formed in quiet closed networks that allowed a small group to incubate their ideas before broadcasting them widely but facebook and twitter are replacing these productive private spaces to the detriment of activists around the world why did the arab spring fall apart why did occupy wall street never gain traction has black lives matter lived up to its full potential beckerman reveals what this new social media ecosystem lacks everything from patience to focus and offers a recipe for growing radical ideas again lyrical and profound the quiet before looks to the past to help us imagine a different future a scholar and activist tells the story of change makers operating within the chinese communist system whose ideas of social action necessarily differ from those dominant in western liberal societies the chinese government has increased digital censorship under xi jinping why because online activism works it is perceived as a threat in halls of power in the other digital china jing wang a scholar at mit and an activist in china shatters the view that citizens of nonliberal societies are either brainwashed or complicit either imprisoned for speaking out or paralyzed by fear instead wang shows the impact of a less confrontational kind of activism whereas westerners tend to equate action with open criticism and street revolutions chinese activists are building an invisible and quiet coalition to bring incremental progress to their society many chinese change makers practice nonconfrontational activism they prefer to walk around obstacles rather than break through them tactfully navigating between what is lawful and what is illegitimate the other digital china describes this massive gray zone where ngos digital entrepreneurs university students it companies like tencent and sina and tech communities operate they study the policy winds in beijing devising ways to press their case without antagonizing a regime where taboo terms fluctuate at different moments what emerges is an ever expanding networked activism on a grand scale under extreme ideological constraints the majority of chinese activists opt for neither revolution nor inertia they share a mentality common in china rules are meant to be bent if not resisted only a decade ago the notion that museums galleries and heritage organisations might engage in activist practice with explicit intent to act upon inequalities injustices and environmental crises was met with scepticism and often derision seeking to purposefully bring about social change was viewed by many within and beyond the museum community as inappropriately political and antithetical to fundamental professional values today although the idea remains controversial the way we think about the roles and responsibilities of museums as knowledge based social institutions is changing museum activism examines the increasing significance of this activist trend in thinking and practice at this crucial time in the evolution of museum thinking and practice this ground breaking volume brings together more than fifty contributors working across six continents to explore analyse and critically reflect upon the museum s relationship to activism including contributions from practitioners artists activists and researchers this wide ranging examination of new and divergent expressions of the inherent power of museums as forces for good and as activists in civil society aims to encourage further experimentation and enrich the debate in this nascent and uncertain field of museum practice museum activism elucidates the largely untapped potential for museums as key intellectual and civic resources to address inequalities injustice and environmental challenges this makes the book essential reading for scholars and students of museum and heritage studies gallery studies arts and heritage management and politics it will be a source of inspiration to museum practitioners and museum leaders around the globe meet the new breed of student activists uncompromising focused and connected activism is once again back on college campuses as students protest issues such as sexual assault climate change racial injustice and student debt it s perhaps unsurprising that the current political moment has triggered the rise of a new breed of student activist uncompromising focused and connected but many pundits have variously derided student activists as either snowflakes too fragile to encounter opinions that run contrary to their own or as social justice warriors who aggressively fight against those who transgress the ever changing bounds of political correctness the new student activists moves beyond these simple stereotypes and convenient caricatures to examine the nuanced motives and complex experiences of real life present day college student activists jerusha o conner offers insight into who these student activists are the causes they care about the strategies they deploy the factors that motivate and sustain them and the impact they have had on their campuses and beyond. Conner examines today's student activists, neoactivists who borrow from and build on the legacies of past generations of college student activists, exploring when, how, and why this diverse group of students turned to activism. Conner examines the social and educational influences on their sociopolitical development. She also reveals the fraught but mutually transformative relationship between institutions of higher education and student activists in the contemporary moment. Written for anyone interested in better understanding the latest wave of student activism on campuses, The New Student Activists raises fascinating implications for developmental theory and higher education policy and practice.

Peace marches, protest demonstrations, and campaigns for or against every cause imaginable have long been part of the Australian social and political landscape. This book blends the voices and experiences of insiders with an analysis of the successes and failures, the communication of ideas, and the social and political impacts. It features interviews with some of Australia's best-known activists from the environmental, women's, peace, student, refugee, and Aboriginal movements. With passion and insight, these people articulate their unique form of practical knowledge. Activist wisdom connects this knowledge to key social movement histories and theories, providing a look at the world of activism and its inevitable tensions. Book Jacket

How does it happen that a rather shy and not terribly brave individual finds herself getting arrested on Parliament Hill? Why does a woman who prefers to commune with pole beans all summer end up laboriously writing speeches to present at City Hall? There is no need for this. I am 74 years old. Elderly it would be more suitable for me to spend my remaining days quietly reading novels than singing protest songs. What happened? These are the questions that sometimes plague Donna Sinclair, a widely travelled award-winning journalist for more than 27 years. Now retired, Sinclair could easily sit back and simply enjoy her garden her grandkids and her remaining years with her husband yet that is not what she has chosen to do sinclair like an ever increasing number of her peers as well as younger people the world over has chosen the path of activism but why i am not alone with these questions most activists i am convinced do not wake up one morning and say to themselves i think i will spend today and perhaps the rest of my life antagonizing large corporate bodies with untold amounts of money to spend and even some of my neighbours so that i don't get enough sleep and am constantly making anguished trade offs about how i will spend my time this book is an effort to figure out why and how environmental activists fall passionately in love with a lake a river or a planet and its people it's a primer or an alphabet on how to stay strong enough to keep putting that love into action over and over based on ethnographic research in belgium the netherlands and germany this book presents a novel approach to studying muslim militant activism while much existing research focuses on the process of radicalization these authors introduce a different set of questions that investigate specific modes of activism and their engagement with dominant discourses and practices in media and state policies drawing on social movement theory and foucault s work on counter conduct this research explores how da'wa networks came about and how activists developed themselves in interaction with state and media practices this perspective highlights a form of activism and resistance in which activists turn against policies and debates centring on muslims and islam while attempting to create and protect an alternative space for themselves in which they can experience islam according to their own perception of it the study will contribute to debates about resistance social movements and militant activism among muslims in europe
