that the purpose of the public schools is the training of children for a higher citizenship a more extensive helpfulness in affairs pertaining to the common good no one questions but we need expect no manifestation of a greater integrity unless lofty ideals are kept constantly before them neither painter nor sculptor can produce a greater expression of beauty than that which has been built up in his own consciousness no individual can produce a greater expression of manhood or womanhood than that which he holds in his own mind it is important therefore that a high standard be set for the children in our schools to day the question then arises as to how this result may be attained educators agree that the study of biography is a potent factor in the achievement of this end a new field for biographical study is found in the lives of the great musicians who furnish many examples of untiring effort and persistent endeavor for almost without exception their lives repeat the oft stated but none too often emphasized verity that success comes only to him who earns success we trust that this little volume may aid the many who are striving to enrich the thought concepts of the children under their care
