eastern nepal has long been neglected by all but the most ardent trekkers due to its remoteness and difficult access dominating the northern horizon from afar is kanchenjunga the five treasures of the snows as it is known locally is one of the most difficult and dangerous peaks in the himalaya of all the highest peaks in nepal kanchenjunga is the hardest to reach hiding away at the end of a maze of contorted valleys a secretive and shy massif that is scarcely seen even when within touching distance the five treasures are guarded by more than thirty five lesser treasures that almost steal the show of course a great view of kanchenjunga can be captured on a flight to bhutan from kathmandu with a great deal more ease and comfort but that would be to miss all those fabulous moments on trek to savour peaks such as khumbakarna jannu mera pathibhara chuli chang himal wedge peak kabru talung and rathong are some of the lesser peaks that grace the panoramic views from airy ridges and high notches en route to the base camps there is more to kanchenjunga and eastern nepal than just snowy peaks though the valleys are sliced deep as if slashed with a khukri knife their sides almost sheer the forests are enticing mysterious enchanting and pristine even though they do seem to dominate a little too much of the march in the region is a naturalist's paradise as joseph hooker found out more than 150 years ago this is the first guidebook to this fascinating region since kev reynolds ventured here in the 1980s and 1990s
