this book presents a new view on the relation between labour and community through a focus on craft guilds in the southern netherlands occupational guilds were both powerful and governed by manufacturing masters enabling the latter to imprint their mark upon urban society in an economic socio cultural and political way while the urban community was deeply indebted to a corporative spirit and guild ethic originating in medieval germanic and christian traditions guild based artisans succeeded in being accepted as genuine political and hence rational actors their political identity and agency being based upon their skills and trustworthiness in the long run this corporative spirit and power inexorably waned yet this book shows that an adequate understanding of the development of european modernity i.e. proletarianisation and the emergence of a modern economy and modern economic and political thinking requires taking seriously the ruins upon which it is build these histories can actually be recounted as purifications of sorts in which the economic was separated from the political the individual from the social and the transcendent from the material while the religiously inspired corporative nature of the urban body politic waned the urban artisans lost their credibility as political and rational actors the origin of guilds has been the subject of a great deal of discussion and two opposing theories have been advanced according to the first theory they were the persistence of earlier institutions but what were these institutions some say that more particularly in the south of france they were of roman and byzantine origin and were derived from those collegia of the poorer classes tenuiorum which in the last centuries of the empire chiefly concerned themselves with the provision of funerals or again from the scholae official and compulsory groups which keeping the name of the hall in which their councils assembled prolonged their existence till about the year 1000 first edition in the paradox of prosperity laura cruz explores the world of the book trades as it was constructed in leiden in the decades after the revolt against spanish rule she traces the migration of printers from the southern netherlands to leiden and observes how they congregated within the city and sought contracts with the city's new university but this is only the beginning of a multifaceted analysis of the development of a market driven industry that eventually is organized under the protective umbrella of a guild and this guild in turn is something other than the traditional guilds of medieval origins rather than a bulwark against market forces the guild of the printers was an instrument to exercise market power this book offers a fresh look at the role of an institution that is often dismissed even in the early modern period as a relic of an earlier time leiden s book trade was unique exhibiting a specific quality that calls for a specific explanation laura cruz addresses this historical specificity but goes a step further leiden publishing emerged as an industry with a european scope and with national and international competitors distinguishing the particular from the general and the accidental or providential from the systematic forces at play within early modern european society is an historian s duty but one that is often neglected savoring the particular is often thought to be enough indeed to be the only real purpose of history laura cruz goes further harnessing her rich historical material to the methods of economic and social history from this vantage point she addresses questions that give new insights to the culture of the young republic that are based not only on the thoughts and dreams of individuals but also on the behavior and aspirations of groups and the constraints and opportunities presented by institutions
