as america s most dysfunctional big city detroit faces urban decay population losses fractured neighborhoods with impoverished households an uneducated unskilled workforce too few jobs a shrinking tax base budgetary shortfalls and inadequate public schools looking to the city s future lewis d solomon focuses on pathways to revitalizing detroit while offering a cautiously optimistic viewpoint solomon urges an economic development strategy one anchored in detroit balancing its municipal and public school district s budgets improving the academic performance of its public schools rebuilding its tax base and looking to the private sector to create jobs he advocates an overlapping tripartite political economy one that builds on the foundation of an appropriately sized public sector and a for profit private sector with the latter fueling economic growth although he acknowledges that detroit faces a long road to implementation solomon sketches a vision of a revitalized economic sector based on two key assets vacant land and an unskilled labor force the book is divided into four distinct parts the first provides background and context with a brief overview of the city s numerous challenges the second examines detroit s immediate efforts to overcome its fiscal crisis it proposes ways detroit can be put on the path to financial stability and sustainability the third considers how detroit can implement a new approach to job creation one focused on the for profit private sector not the public sector in the fourth and final part solomon argues that residents should pursue a strategy based on the actions of individuals and community groups rather than looking to large scale projects as the burden of defense borne by reserve forces has increased more attention has been paid to differences between the compensation systems for the reserve and active components one particular emphasis is on the retirement systems a key difference being that reserve members who complete 20 years must wait until age 60 to draw benefits whereas active members can draw benefits immediately upon discharge this monograph compares the reserve and active retirement systems discusses the importance of structuring compensation to enable flexibility in managing active and reserve manpower describes how the debate over reserve retirement reform has differed from active component retirement reform debate and considers obstacles to reform and how they might be overcome it also provides a quantitative assessment of several past congressional proposals to change the reserve retirement system in terms of their effects on reserve participation and personnel costs concluding that proposals to reduce the age at which eligible members may begin receiving retirement benefits are not cost effective means of sustaining or increasing reserve component retention it also concludes that a menu of member options can be a powerful tool to maintain morale and overcome obstacles to reform current members could be given the choice of staying in the current retirement system or joining the new one and the choice might be offered over a period of time say five years new entrants and reentrants with few years of service might be placed under the new system

the most important book yet from the author of the international bestseller the shock doctrine a brilliant explanation of why the climate crisis challenges us to abandon the core free market ideology of our time restructure the global economy and remake our political systems in short either we embrace radical change ourselves or radical changes will be visited upon our physical world the status quo is no longer an option in this changes everything naomi klein argues that climate change isn't just another issue to be neatly filed between taxes and health care it's an alarm that calls us to fix an economic system that is already failing us in many ways klein meticulously builds the case for how massively reducing our greenhouse emissions is our best chance to simultaneously reduce gaping inequalities re-imagine our broken democracies and rebuild our gutted local economies she exposes the ideological desperation of the climate change deniers the messianic delusions of the would-be geoengineers and the tragic defeatism of too many mainstream green initiatives and she demonstrates precisely why the market has not and cannot fix the climate crisis but will instead make things worse with ever more extreme and ecologically damaging extraction methods accompanied by rampant disaster capitalism klein argues that the changes to our relationship with nature and one another that are required to respond to the climate crisis humanely should not be viewed as grim penance but rather as a kind of gift a catalyst to transform broken economic and cultural priorities and to heal long festering historical wounds and she documents the inspiring movements that have already begun this process communities that are not just refusing to be sites of further fossil fuel extraction but are building the next regeneration based economies right now can we pull off these changes in time nothing is certain nothing except that climate change changes everything and for a very brief time the nature of that change is still up to us rarely did ancient authors write about the lives of women even more rarely did they write about the lives of ordinary women not queens or heroines who influenced war or politics not sensational examples of virtue or vice not christian martyrs or ascetics but women of moderate status who experienced everyday joys and sorrows and had everyday merits and failings such a woman was monica now saint monica because of her relationship with her son augustine who wrote about her in the confessions and elsewhere despite her rather unremarkable life saint monica has inspired a robust controversy in academia the church and the augustine reading public alike some agree with ambrose bishop of milan who knew monica that augustine was exceptionally blessed in having such a mother while others think that monica is a classic example of the manipulative mother who lives through her son using religion to repress his sexual life and to control him even when he seems to escape in monica an ordinary saint gillian clark reconciles these competing images of monica s life and legacy arriving at a woman who was shrewd and enterprising but also meek and gentle weighing augustine's discussion of his mother against other evidence of women's lives in late antiquity clark achieves portraits both of monica individually and of the many women like her augustine did not claim that his mother was a saint but he did think that the challenges of everyday life required courage and commitment to christian principle monica's ordinary life as both he and clark tell it showed both monica an ordinary saint illuminates monica wife and mother in the context of the societal expectations and burdens that shaped her and all ordinary women as the u s experience in iraq following the 2003 invasion made abundantly clear failure to properly plan for risks associated with postconflict stabilization and reconstruction can have a devastating impact on the overall success of a military mission in waging war planning peace aaron rapport investigates how u s presidents and their senior advisers have managed vital noncombat activities while the nation is in the midst of fighting or preparing to fight major wars he argues that research from psychology specifically construal level theory can help explain how individuals reason about the costs of postconflict noncombat operations that they perceive as lying in the distant future in addition to preparations for phase iv in the lead up to the iraq war rapport looks at the occupation of germany after world war ii the planned occupation of north korea in 1950 and noncombat operations in vietnam in 1964 and 1965 applying his insights to these cases he finds that civilian and military planners tend to think about near term tasks in concrete terms seriously assessing the feasibility of the means they plan to employ to secure valued ends for tasks they perceive as further removed in time they tend to focus more on the desirability of the overarching goals they are pursuing rather than the potential costs risks and challenges associated with the means necessary to achieve these goals construal level theory rapport contends provides a coherent explanation of how a strategic disconnect can occur it can also show postwar planners how to avoid such perilous missteps how organized resistance to new fossil fuel infrastructure became a political force and how this might affect the transition to renewable energy organized resistance to new fossil fuel infrastructure particularly conflicts over pipelines has become a formidable political force in north america in this book george hoberg examines whether such place based environmental movements are effective ways of promoting climate action if they might inadvertently feed resistance to the development of renewable energy infrastructure and what other more innovative processes of decision making would encourage the acceptance of clean energy systems focusing on a series of conflicts over new oil sands pipelines hoberg investigates activists strategy of blocking fossil fuel infrastructure often in alliance with indigenous groups and examines the political and environmental outcomes of these actions after discussing the oil sands policy regime and the relevant political institutions in Canada and the United States. Hoberg analyzes in detail four anti pipeline campaigns examining the controversies over the Keystone XL, the most well known of these movements and the first one to use infrastructure resistance as a core strategy. The Northern Gateway pipeline, the Trans Mountain pipeline and the Energy East pipeline. He then considers the resistance dilemma, the potential of place based activism to threaten the much needed transition to renewable energy. He examines several episodes of resistance to clean energy infrastructure in Eastern Canada and the United States. Finally, Hoberg describes some innovative processes of energy decision making including strategic environment assessment and cumulative impact assessment looking at cases in British Columbia and Lower Alberta.

For ten years James Robertson walked the twenty one mile round trip from his Detroit home to his factory job when his story went viral it brought him an outpouring of attention and support but what of Robertson's Detroit neighbors likewise stuck in a blighted city without services as basic as a bus line what they're left with after decades of disinvestment and decline is DIY urbanism sweeping their own streets maintaining public parks planting community gardens boarding up empty buildings even acting as real estate agents and landlords for abandoned homes. DIY Detroit describes a phenomenon that in our times of austerity measures and market based governance has become woefully routine as inhabitants of deteriorating cities domesticate public services in order to get by. The voices that animate this book humanize Detroit's troubles from a middle class African American civic activist drawn back by a crisis of conscience to a young Latina stay at home mom who has never left the city and whose husband works in construction to a European woman with a mixed race adopted family and a passion for social reform who introduces a chicken coop goat shed and market garden into the neighborhood. These people show firsthand how living with disinvestment means getting organized to manage public works on a neighborhood scale helping friends and family members solve logistical problems and promoting creativity compassion and self direction as an alternative to broken dreams and passive lifestyles. Kimberley Kinder reveals how the efforts of these detroiters and others like them create new urban logics and transform the expectations residents have about their environments at the same time she cautions against romanticizing such acts which are after all short term solutions to a deep and spreading social injustice that demands comprehensive change
