this book is an unusually exploration of the ethnobotanical study through interdisciplinary approach that combines linguistics botany and anthropological aspects it gives an in depth account of the practical life of the digo in their day to day knowledge and conception of the plant world the digo were involved in the study as a representative of the african ethnic groups which provides for a scholastic challenge to prove other wise the subject matter is drawn from the general botanical topics viz plant description naming identification and classification the coverage however is incomplete without considering the fields of plant knowledge application such as agriculture and healing the book provides for evidence to recognise that although unwritten the african traditional plant knowledge is not muddled as first impressions might suggest

this book stems from the seminal work of robert venturi and aims at re projecting it in the current cultural debate by extending it to the scale of landscape and placing it in connection with representative issues it brings out the transdisciplinary synthesis of a necessarily interdisciplinary approach to the theme aimed at creating new models which are able to represent the complexity of a contradictory reality and to redefine the centrality of human dimension as such the volume gathers multiple experiences developed in different geographical areas which come into connection with the role of representation composed of 43 chapters written by 81 authors from around the world with an introduction by jim venturi and cezar niculescu the volume is divided into two parts the first one more theoretical and the other one which showcases real world applications although there is never a total split between criticism and operational experimentation of research
