what say wood is a publication on our exhibition projects for the venice architecture biennale and how they have inspired us to advance investigations challenging us to develop the discourse of our practice the formal questions that emerged in these tasks have helped us directly as well as indirectly in an unconscious way to get further into our architectural methods and processes the possibility to concentrate on pure structure and meaning with focus on the calibration of form and material has helped us in our teaching and practice there is a close relationship between our exhibition projects and our realised projects our experiences in these exhibition projects have helped us dare to be more personal and direct and deeper within our methods and processes a common intention for all the exhibitions has been to offer a very direct and instant experience of matter materiality and space we also want our artefacts be something one is a bit puzzled about and to encourage a deeper reading of geometry and materiality as well as a reflection on what architecture can be ordinary banal quotidian these words are rarely used to praise architecture but in fact they represent the interest of a growing number of architects looking to the everyday to escape the ever quickening cycles of consumption and fashion that have reduced architecture to a series of stylistic fads architecture of the everyday makes a plea for an architecture that is emphatically un monumental anti heroic and unconcerned with formal extravagance edited by deborah berke and steven harris this collection of writings photo essays and projects describes an architecture that draws strength from its simplicity use of common materials and relationship to other fields of study topics range from a website that explores the politics of domesticity to a transformation of the sidewalk in los angeles little tokyo to a discussion of the work of robert venturi and introducing a basis for design that transcends fixed notions of style and emerging technologies this book emphasizes feeling moving and the experiential since the book s initial publication in 2000 architects and writers have been drawn to a more sensory approach to architecture but there is still a need to encourage and to illustrate the pursuit of design not as a project imposing preconceived ideas upon a situation but as a process evolving from the inside from movement sensation surroundings and a dialogue between architect and client the authors describe such an approach that places human life experience and materiality at the centre of design and that seeks out opportunities for discovery growth and transformation call to order the first in a series of books to be produced by the university of miami school of architecture is inspired by rappel l ordre the post wwi european art movement that rejected the extreme tenants of the avant garde and its praise of machinery violence and war in favor of a renewed interest in tradition call to order suggests a re grouping and a re grounding upon the foundations of the discipline and examines an international group of architects who are ostensibly rehearsing the ethos of the neo rationalist movement when architects and thinkers converged in their resistance to what they saw as an erosion of the discipline by behaviorism and the social sciences call to order frames and examines similar resistant practices in the contemporary architectural scene and in the context of a long historical trajectory to tease out and articulate a cultural project that is relevant to the ongoing architectural debate Architecture from the Inside Out the memoranda which form the basis of the following essay have been thrown together during the preparation of one of the sections of the third volume of modern painters i once thought of giving them a more expanded form but their utility such as it may be would probably be diminished by farther delay in their publication more than it would be increased by greater care in their arrangement obtained in every case by personal observation there may be among them some details valuable even to the experienced architect but with respect to the opinions founded upon them i must be prepared to bear the charge of impertinence which can hardly but attach to the writer who assumes a dogmatical tone in speaking of an art he has never practised there are however cases in which men feel too keenly to be silent and perhaps too strongly to be wrong i have been forced into this impertinence and have suffered too much from the destruction or neglect of the architecture i best loved and from the erection of that which i cannot love to reason cautiously respecting the modesty of my opposition to the principles which have induced the scorn of the one or directed the design of the other and i have been the less careful to modify the confidence of my statements of principles because in the midst of the opposition and uncertainty of our architectural systems it seems to me that there is something grateful in any positive opinion though in many points wrong as even weeds are useful that grow on a bank of sand every apology is however due to the reader for the hasty and imperfect execution of the plates having much more serious work in hand and desiring merely to render them illustrative of my meaning i have sometimes very completely failed even of that humble aim and the text being generally written before the illustration was completed sometimes naively describes as sublime or beautiful features which the plate represents by a blot i shall be grateful if the reader will in such cases refer the expressions of praise to the architecture and not to the illustration a fully illustrated beautifully produced edition of junichiro tanizaki s wise and evocative essay on japanese culture we find beauty not in the thing itself but in the patterns of shadows the light and the darkness that one thing against another creates were it not for shadows there would be no beauty this book is in fact a portal reading it you will be led by junichiro tanizaki s light touch into a mysterious and tranquil world of darkness and shadows where gold flashes in the gloom and a deep stillness reigns if you are accustomed to equate light with clarity the faded with the worthless and the dim with the dreary prepare for a courteous but powerful realignment of your ideas in praise of shadows is a poetic paean to traditional japanese aesthetics in a free ranging style that moves from architecture to no theatre and from cookery to lighting tanizaki teaches us to see the beauty in tarnished metal the sombre dignity in unglazed pottery the primacy of organic materials that bear witness to the regular touch of human hands it is also astonishingly prescient offering a gentle warning against the quest for airbrushed perfection and reminding us that too much light can pollute and obscure our natural world in this special edition the text is accompanied by specially selected images to complement tanizaki s reflections and further illustrate the pattern and beauty of shadows the impact of early italian humanism on the development of quattrocento architecture has received much attention in recent years providing the foundation for the re evaluation of architectural principles in the age of humanism christine smith focuses on the ways that works of architecture or architectural imagery became important vehicles for the expression of the humanists ethical political and cultural concerns smith looks at the writings of the humanists and investigates what they believed was important in the built environment since the humanists accounts of architecture responded to other literary texts she analyzes in detail their relations with specific classical medieval and contemporary sources although few early renaissance authors evinced much interest in architectural style as we understand it today the early humanists frequently used architectural imagery in order to make moral discussion more vivid in humanist thought buildings also served as evidence for the cultural status of their times and for the dignity of humanity they were seen as historical documents useful for evaluating the past and for transmitting the desired image of the present to the future smith organizes the essays around three themes the use of architecture in ethical discourse the critical criteria with which the early humanists did and did not approach architectural experience and the development of architectural description as it relates to the renaissance recovery of eloquence she also gives special attention to the importance of sensory experience in early renaissance epistemology the problem of the middle ages and the contribution of byzantium to early humanist culture from the myth of arcadia through to the twenty first century ideas about sustainability how we imagine better urban environments remain persistently relevant and raise recurring questions how do cities evolve as complex spaces nurturing both urban creativity and the fortuitous art of discovery and by which mechanisms do they foster imagination and innovation while past utopias were conceived in terms of an ideal geometry contemporary exemplary models of urban design seek technological solutions of optimal organisation the venice variations explores venice as a prototypical city that may hold outcome of social and economic networks of communication its urban creativity though came to represent the quintessential combination of place and institutions of its time through a discussion of venice and two other works owing their inspiration to this city italo calvino's invisible cities and le corbusier's venice hospital sophia psarra describes venice as a system that starts to resemble a highly probabilistic algorithm that is a structure with a small number of rules capable of producing a large number of variations the rapidly escalating processes of urban development around our big cities share many of the motivations for survival shelter and trade that brought venice into existence rather than seeing these places as problems to be solved we need to understand how urban complexity can evolve as happened from its unprepossessing origins in the marshes of the venetian lagoon to the model city that endured a thousand years this book frees venice from stereotypical representations revealing its generative capacity to inform potential other venices for the future can architecture help us find our place and way in today s complex world can it return individuals to a whole to a world to a community developing giedion s claim that contemporary architecture s main task is to interpret a way of life valid for our time philosopher karsten harries answers that architecture should serve a common ethos but if architecture is to meet that task it first has to free itself from the dominant formalist approach and get beyond the notion that its purpose is to produce endless variations of the decorated shed in a series of cogent and balanced arguments harries questions the premises on which architects and theorists have long relied premises which have contributed to architecture s current identity crisis and marginalization he first criticizes the aesthetic approach focusing on the problems of decoration and ornament he then turns to the language of architecture if the main task of architecture is indeed interpretation in just what sense can it be said to speak and what should it be speaking about expanding upon suggestions made by martin heidegger harries also considers the relationship of building to the idea and meaning of dwelling architecture harries observes has a responsibility to community but its ethical function is inevitably also political he concludes by examining these seemingly paradoxical functions
