Rise and Fall of the Imperial Guptas 1996-12-31 the kuttani mata of damodaragupta is one of the few works in the history of classical sanskrit literature the time and locale of the composition whereof can be ascertained with a fair degree of certainty we learn from kalhana that damodaragupta occupied a high position under the karkota naga king jayapida vinayaditya who ruled over kashmir in the closing years of the eighth and early years of the ninth centuries a d a critical study of the internal evidence indicates that the work was probably composed a few years after the close of jayapida s reign as indicated by the title the text aims at exposing the secrets of the whole craft of prostitution in the form of the advice of an experienced bawd kuttani to a courtesan and from this point of view it occupies a unique place in the whole range of sanskrit literature for the account is based not only on the standard erotic texts like vatsyayana s kama sutra but draws copiously upon the poet s personal observation of the actual state of affairs obtaining in post jayapida kashmir but the poem has a much wider scope than its professed theme and covers the entire gamut of contemporary life of kashmir in particular and northern india in general in all its varied aspects and as such forms an important source for the study of contemporary indian society the present work attempts a critical evaluation of this evidence in the light of relevant literary and archaeological data in the process new light is thrown on several important questions

India As Seen In The Kuttanimata Of Damodara Gupta 2021-12-14 this collection brings together nine essays accompanied by nine short translations that expand the assumptions that have typically framed literary histories and creatively re draws their boundaries both temporally and spatially the essays rooted in the humanities and informed by interdisciplinary area studies explore multiple linkages between forms of print culture linguistic identities and diverse vernacular literary spaces in colonial and post colonial south asia the accompanying translations from bengali hindi marathi tamil and urdu not only round out these scholarly explorations and comparisons but invite readers to recognise the assiduous intimate and critical labour of expanding access to the vernacular archive while also engaging with the challenges linguistic cultural and political of rendering vernacular articulations of gendered experience and embodiment in english collectively the essays and translations foreground complex and politicised expressions of gender and genre in fictional and non fictional print materials and thus draw meaningful connections between the vernacular and literature the everyday and the marginals and gender and sentiment they expand vernacular literary archives canons and genealogies and push us to theorise the nature of writing in south asia literary sentiments in the vernacular is a significant new contribution to south asian literary history and gender studies and will be a great resource for academics researchers and advanced students of history literature cultural studies politics and sociology the chapters in this book were originally published as a special issue of south asia journal of south asian studies
