one of npr's best books of the year straight's memoir is a lyric social history of her multiracial clan in riverside that explores the bonds of love and survival that bind them with a particular emphasis on the women's stories the aftereffect of all these disparate stories juxtaposed in a single epic is remarkable its resonance lingers for days after reading san francisco chronicle in the country of women is a valuable social history and a personal narrative that reads like a love song to america and indomitable women in inland southern california near the desert and the mexican border susan straight a self proclaimed book nerd and dwayne sims an african american basketball player started dating in high school after college they married and drove to amherst massachusetts where straight met her teacher and mentor james baldwin who encouraged her to write once back in riverside at driveway barbecues and fish fries with the large close knit sims family straight and eventually her three daughters heard for decades the stories of dwayne's female ancestors some women escaped violence in post slavery tennessee some escaped murder in jim crow mississippi and some fled abusive men straight's mother in law alberta sims is the descendant at the heart of this memoir susan's family too reflects the hardship and resilience of women pushing onward from switzerland canada and the colorado rockies to california a pakistani word biraderi is one straight uses to define a complex system of kinship and clan those who become your family an entire community helped raise her daughters of her three girls now grown and working in museums and the entertainment industry straight writes the daughters of our ancestors carry in their blood at least three continents we are not about borders we are about love and survival certain books give off the sense that you won't want them to end so splendid the writing so lyrical the stories such is the case with southern california novelist susan straight's new memoir in the country of women her vibrant pages are filled with people of churned together blood culled from scattered immigrants and native peoples indomitable women and their babies yet they never succumb straight gives us permission to remember what went before with passion and attachment los angeles times from desperately seeking susan steel magnolias and thelma louise to desert hearts girl friends and passion fish mainstream cinema has seen a wave of films focusing on friendships between women in tire company of women is the first critical work to investigate the recent resurgence of this variety of the woman's film examining the female friendship film since the 1970s and setting it against older films of the 1930s and 1940s such as mildred pierce and stella dallas karen hollinger studies the character of the films themselves and how they speak to female viewers she argues that while many of these films initially seem to affirm the power of female friendship and reject traditional images of women most of them ultimately fall back on conventional feminine roles hollinger argues that the female friendship film by attempting to assimilate into the mainstream uses ideas from the women's movement like female autonomy and sisterhood that are particularly susceptible to compromise it is this blend of empowering and conservative elements that makes the female friendship film neither a true challenge to the status quo nor a mere confirmation of dominant ideology but rather a multifaceted cinematic form that reflects both of these strains hollinger considers all of the major issues in feminist film criticism from audience reception to the identification with characters from sexuality to racial identity engaging and provocative in the company of women is an entertaining and enlightening account of one of contemporary cinema's most vital genres
