Defense Manpower Commission Staff Studies and Supporting Papers 1976 law enforcement officers serve the public by performing a broad range of activities that range from passive surveillance and investigative work to the dynamic arrest situations that can quickly become violent and life threatening our justice system permits the use of force only when necessary and limits its use to specifically defined situations thus an officer's survival depends upon his/her ability to quickly assess a situation and respond with an appropriate level of force with legal guidelines in place governing the use of force it may appear to be a simple process for an officer to determine the appropriate response for a particular situation but it is not the decision making environment for law enforcement officers commonly includes a component that has tremendous impact on the outcome of the factor of stress critical decisions often have to be made quickly to save a life or prevent further harm clear rational thinking in a life threatening time urgent situation is vital to officer survival all too often however the rational thought process must compete against the rush of adrenaline and a professional desire to apprehend the suspect sometimes at too high a cost

Development of the U.S. Army Research Institute's Officer Administrative Data Base 1993 this book highlights how the practical skills of the police officer can be transferred into the realm of academic research and support them in becoming part of the evidence based policing movement it starts by exploring the professionalisation of the police service through higher education accreditation and the different methodologies of social research practice using operational comparisons and a little humour it guides the reader through the swamp of concepts and processes such as ethical approval research paradigms and data gathering and analysis it then takes them on a journey of reflection and reflexivity challenging their own perspective on policing and working within the wider criminal justice sector and how they can make a valuable contribution to the development of policing practice

Quarterly Review of Military Literature 1984 professor ericson and his colleagues followed the work of patrol officers in a large canadian regional police force from their direct observations comes a wealth of information quantitatively assembled and qualitatively discussed with insights into the nature of policing this book reveals that the police are not mere referees of our legal lives blowing the whistle on our infractions they are censors of certain types of possibly wrong actions they are selective in their invocation of criminal law and use the law artfully to restore settings to orderliness ericson emphasizes the routine manner in which the patrol officer intervenes and gains compliance from the citizenry he demonstrates that when the criminal process is invoked the police maintain fundamental control over the court outcome using these findings he addresses basic questions about the role of police in relation to crime and how it is produced literally by the patrol officer crime is also seen as the primary basis of police legitimacy which in turn enables the police to engage in broad surveillance and information gathering the author's conclusions about the nature of policing and his discussion of the implications of proposals for reform of police will generate better informed deliberation in political and public decision making and in the general study of sociological theory
