Hola, amigos! 2014 the only recent english language work on spanish american indigenismo from a literary perspective estelle tarica s work shows how modern mexican and andean discourses about the relationship between indians and non indians create a unique literary aesthetic that is instrumental in defining the experience of mestizo nationalism engaging with narratives by jess lara jos mara arguedas and rosario castellanos among other

thinkers tarica explores the rhetorical and ideological aspects of interethnic affinity and connection in her examination she demonstrates that these connections posed a challenge to existing racial hierarchies in spanish america by celebrating a new kind of national self at the same time that they contributed to new forms of subjection and discrimination going beyond debates about the relative merits of indigenismo and mestizaje tarica puts forward a new perspective on indigenista literature and modern mestizo identities by revealing how these ideologies are symptomatic of the dilemmas of national subject formation the inner life of mestizo nationalism offers insight into the contemporary resurgence and importance of indigenista discourses in latin america estelle tarica is associate professor of latin american literature and culture at the university of california berkeley

The Inner Life of Mestizo Nationalism 2008 did you experience pain and loss in the spring of your life were you robbed of family security and love at an early age did you find yourself empty of color and overcast by shades of grey after losing a loved one have you experienced hopelessness sadness and depression then shades of life is the book for you shades of life by emma hilson gregory poetically reminds the reader that it is ok to cry and not feel ok life does not always go how we think or expect it should but our will to carry on and hold onto love and hope is part of the wonder of living what people are saying about shades of life there is a fine line between love and hate light and dark good and bad some may even say there s only a shade difference between them all two emotions seemingly opposite one another but in fact they re lighter and darker shades of the same feeling this book shades of life blends those emotions exposing the hues of the human experience so honestly shade is a result of how light or dark a color appears to its counterparts and that effect can be seen in our life experiences as expressed in shades of life from the dark stains of tragedy to the bright tones of innocence and triumph emma hilson gregory casts an array of tints and tinges across these pages in the form of colorful penmanship accompanying the words are shadows coolness and intensity in the form of black and white artwork and imagery that live amongst the shade cast by the author s mighty pen the illustrator marie moldovan crosshatches the words to the artwork with a perfect understanding of light and darkness that brings playful images from the shadows and fills in the shadows with a darkness that is felt this read spans the emotional spectrum from tapping into the inner child to triggering the heavier hearted realities of life joe mykut author of beautiful boy

International Development and Alternative Futures 1990 the enigmatic link between the natural and artistic beauty that is to be contemplated but not eaten on the one hand and the eucharistic beauty that is both seen with the eyes of faith and eaten on the other intrigues me and inspires this book one cannot ask theo aesthetic questions about the eucharist without engaging fundamental questions about the relationship between beauty art broadly defined and eating from eating beauty in a remarkable book that is at once learned startlingly original and highly personal ann w astell explores the ambiguity of the phrase eating beauty the phrase evokes the destruction of beauty the devouring mouth of the grave the mouth of hell to eat beauty is to destroy it yet in the case of the eucharist the person of faith who eats the host is transformed into beauty itself literally incorporated into christ in this sense astell explains the eucharist was productive of an entire way of life a virtuous life form an artwork with christ himself as the principal artist the eucharist established for the people of the middle ages distinctive schools of sanctity cistercian franciscan dominican and ignatian whose members were united by the eucharistic sacrament that they received reading the lives of the saints not primarily as historical documents but as iconic expressions of original artworks fashioned by the eucharistic christ astell puts the faceless host in a dynamic relationship with these icons with the advent of each new spirituality the christian idea of beauty expanded to include first the marred beauty of the saint and finally that of the church torn by division an anti aesthetic beauty embracing process suffering deformity and disappearance as well as the radiant lightness of the resurrected body this astonishing work of intellectual and religious history is illustrated with telling artistic examples ranging from medieval manuscript illuminations to sculptures by michelangelo and paintings by salvador dalí astell puts the lives of medieval saints in conversation with modern philosophers as disparate as simone weil and g w f hegel
