RE: Reading the Postmodern 2011-01-14

it would be difficult to exaggerate the worldwide impact of postmodernism on the fields of cultural production and the social sciences over the last quarter century even if the concept has been understood in various even contradictory ways an interest in postmodernism and postmodernity has been especially strong in canada in part thanks to the country's non-monolithic approach to history and its multicultural understanding of nationalism which seems to align with the decentralized plural and open-ended pursuit of truth as a multiple possibility as outlined by jean-françois lyotard in fact long before lyotard published his influential work the postmodern condition in 1979 canadian writers and critics were employing the term to describe a new kind of writing re-reading the postmodern marks a first cautious step toward a history of canadian postmodernism exploring the development of the idea of the postmodern and debates about its meaning and its applicability to various genres of canadian writing and charting its decline in recent years as a favoured critical trope in this study of the canadian novelist margaret laurence recent narratological models provide the theoretical framework for a textual analysis that aims at complementing previous thematic critiques the chief focus is on the stone angel and the diviners which the conclusion then presents in the context of the other novels in laurence's manawaka cycle consideration of the published works is rounded off with genetic comparison of the novelist's typescript drafts and an evaluation of the manuscript notes kept in the archives of mcmaster and york universities the central structural principle of the stone angel is its dovetailing of past and present scenes temporal arrangement reflecting the frequency and duration of hagar's memories reveals the hold of memory over the central character and her attempts to suppress her fear of mortality hagar as narrator manipulates character presentation and description to her own advantage in a basically oppositional structure her need for control is reflected in the neat ordering of the narrative the verbal texture of the novel serves to establish a value system that insists on the superiority of imported culture over western canadian forms the diviners shares a number of narrative similarities with the stone angel but the latter's formal rigidity has yielded by the time laurence writes her last novel to the concept of multiplicity characters time planes perspectives and narrative voices including metafictional commentaries textual coherence is secured via narrative strategies including typography generational paradigms repetition parallelism intertextuality and tropological patterning that render the novel readable and present experience as ordered in a time of cultural flux and personal crisis though a large proportion of Canadians live in suburban communities the Canadian cultural imaginary is filled with other landscapes the wilderness the prairie cityscapes and small towns are the settings by which we define our nation rather than the strip mall the single family home and the developing subdivision which for many are ubiquitous features of everyday life Canadian suburban considers the cultures of suburbia as they are articulated in English Canadian fiction published from the 1960s to the present Cheryl Cowdy begins her excursion through novels set between 1945 and 1970 the heyday of modern suburban development with works by canonical authors such as Margaret Laurence Richard B. Wright Margaret Atwood and Barbara Gowdy her investigation then turns to the meaning of the suburbs within fiction set after the 1970s when a more corporate model of suburbanization prevailed and ends with an investigation of how writers from immigrant and racialized communities are radically transforming the suburban imaginary Cowdy argues there is no one authentic suburban imaginary but multiple at times contradictory representations that disrupt prevalent assumptions about suburban homogeneity Canadian suburban provides a foundation for understanding the literary history of suburbia and a refreshing reassessment of the role of space and place in Canadian culture and identity at no point in recorded history has there been an absence of intense and heated discussion about the subject of how to conduct relations between women and men this handbook provides a comprehensive guide to these omnipresent issues and debates mapping the present and future of thinking about feminist theory the chapters gathered here present the state of the art in scholarship in the field covering epistemology and marginality literary visual and cultural representations sexuality macro and microeconomics of gender conflict and peace the most important consensus in this volume is that a central organizing tenet of feminism is its willingness to examine the ways in which gender and relations between women and men have been and are organized the authors bring a shared commitment to the critical appraisal of gender relations as well as a recognition that to think theoretically is not to detach concerns from lived experience but to extend the possibilities of understanding with this focus on theory and theorizing about the world in which we live this handbook asks us across all disciplines and situations to abandon our taken-for-granted assumptions about the world and interrogate both the origin and the implications of our ideas about gender relations and feminism it is an essential reference work for advanced students and academics not only of feminist theory but of gender and sexuality across the humanities and social sciences
