participants and the meaning of vague or paradoxical utterances meaning in life writes philosopher irving singer and the meaning in our own lives result from creative efforts on our part it is not a prior reality awaiting our discovery though we talk about a search for meaning what we are seeking is primarily a mode of creativity that will make our lives meaningful in clear concise and direct language singer delves into the questions that beset most people throughout their lives questions that often stir painful confusion and distress and sometimes cause agonies of doubt and despair singer's patient consideration of the role of creativity in human experience leads him to distinguish between happiness and meaningfulness and to offer challenging ideas about what would constitute a life that is significant important in itself and in its consequences even if values pass on through generations he claims they must be created anew by each individual in the creation of value the first volume of his trilogy on the good life singer studies the nature of imagination idealization and love in the context of humanity's attempt to define itself through the pursuit of meanings and values that it creates singer confronts life's most troubling problems the meaning of death the place of anxiety in daily existence the conditions needed for us to have a life worth living and the possibility of a love of life in others as well as in ourselves as newer approaches to biblical criticism become more established and influential it is essential that students and other serious readers of the bible be exposed to them and become familiar with them that is the main impetus behind the present volume which is offered as a textbook for those who wish to go further than the approaches covered in to each its own meaning by exploring more recent or experimental ways of reading from the introduction this book is a

readers using examples from the old and new testament to help illustrate their discussion topics include cultural criticism disability studies queer criticism postmodernism ecological criticism new historicism popular culture postcolonial criticism and psychological criticism each section includes a list of key terms and definitions and suggestions for further reading this book provides an analysis of values and identity within the context of ancient modern and contemporary philosophy this issue is addressed from the viewpoints of intersubjective and individual experience the contributors to this volume answer the following questions what are the lived meanings of values and ethics from a philosophical sociological and psychological perspective how does society constitute its own life word what is the meaning of values what is the role of values in defining self identity how does their meaning change within a political context do politics and aesthetics affect our moral identity what is the role of values in the state of nature how does art accomplish its primary task raising human consciousness over and against the reified world of commodities this volume offers an opportunity to reflect on these issues from a philosophical point of view and to explore the dialogue of philosophy with sociology and psychology this book offers a new perspective on language teaching by placing moral issues that is questions of values at the core of what it is to be a teacher the teacher student relation is central to this view rather than the concept of language teaching as merely a technical matter of managing students acquisition of language the message is that all language teaching involves an interplay of deeply held values but in each teaching situation these values are played out in different ways johnston does not tell readers what to think but only suggests what to think about values in english language teaching explores the complex and often contradictory moral landscape of the language classroom gradually revealing how teaching is not a matter of clear cut choices but of wrestling with dilemmas and making difficult decisions in situations often riven with conflict it examines the underlying values that teachers hold as individuals and as members of their profession and demonstrates how those values are played out in the real world of language classrooms matters addressed include connections between the moral and political dimensions in english language teaching and between values and religious beliefs relationship s between teacher identity and values the meaning of professionalism and how it is associated with morality and values the ways in which teacher development is a moral issue and the marginality of english language teaching all the examples are taken from real life teaching situations the complexity and messiness of these situations is always acknowledged including both individual influences and broader social cultural and political forces at play in english language classrooms by using actual situations as the starting point for analysis johnston offers a philosophy based in practice and recognizes the primacy of lived experience as a basis for moral analysis examples come from teaching contexts around the world including brazil thailand poland japan central african republic turkey and taiwan as well as various settings in the united states this book will change the way teachers see language classrooms their own or those of others it is a valuable resource for teachers of esl concepts of a special sort this book suggests that religion in its usual sense can be replaced by something better that the human spirit or subjectivity can be the subject of scientific study and that lack of purpose or design in the universe is not a handicap but a positive opportunity for intelligent beings to make of the universe and its contents what they reasonably can the book breaks new ground in suggesting a radical alternative to religion it offers a scientific and humanist alternative to religion which appeals to people s critical faculties rather than emotions or intuitions it also challenges current views of causation and the principle of sufficient reason by stressing the subjectivity of our reasoning powers and clarifying these in relation to an independent external reality it develops and elaborates a notion of the noosphere within a theoretical system this enables the notion to assume a scientific importance which it currently lacks because it is treated as an this book suggests that religion in its usual sense can be replaced by something better that the human spirit or subjectivity can be the subject of scientific study and that lack of purpose or design in the universe is not a handicap but a positive opportunity for intelligent beings to make of the universe and its contents what they reasonably can the book breaks new ground in suggesting a radical alternative to religion it offers a scientific and humanist alternative to religion which appeals to people's critical faculties rather than emotions or intuitions it also challenges current views of causation and the principle of sufficient reason by stressing the subjectivity of our reasoning powers and clarifying these in relation to an independent external reality it develops and elaborates a notion of the noosphere within a theoretical system this enables the notion to assume a scientific importance which it currently lacks because it is treated as an isolated eccentric and rather mystical idea
