Human Motivation

2013-06-17

Weiner introduces and offers his own motivation for producing this most impressive work with the following: there are two distinct approaches to the study of motivation. One stratagem is a product of academic experimental procedures while the second is an outgrowth of clinical non-experimental methods. Each of the approaches has unique advantages and disadvantages, but all investigators in this field are guided by a single basic question: namely, why do organisms think and behave as they do? To help answer that basic question, human motivation presents an entire range of motivation studies from psychoanalytic, social learning, and humanistic theory to social facilitation, arousal, emotions, personal responsibility, and the irrationality of attributions through chapter and verse of Hullian and Lewinian theory.

The International Handbook of Leadership for Learning brings together chapters by distinguished authors from thirty-one countries in nine different regions of the world. The handbook contains nine sections that provide regional overviews, a consideration of theoretical and contextual aspects, system and policy approaches that promote leadership for learning with a focus on educating school leaders for learning, and the role of the leader in supporting learning. It also considers the challenge of educating current leaders for this new perspective and how leaders themselves can develop leadership for learning in others and in their organisations, especially in diverse contexts and situations. The final chapter considers what we now know about leadership for learning and looks at ways this might be further improved in the future. The book provides the reader with an understanding of the rich contextual nature of learning in schools and the role of school leaders and leadership development in promoting this. It concludes that the preposition for between the two readily known and understood terms of leadership and learning changes everything as it foregrounds learning and complexifies rather than simplifies what that word may mean. Whereas common terms such as instructional leadership reduce learning to outcomes, leadership for learning embraces a much wider developmental view of learning.

this book provides no answer key if you are looking for one right answer go elsewhere implicit in the current educational reform movement towards standards and standardization is the belief that the work of teachers is quantifiable that the hours and days of contact time between teachers and students can be reduced to a number that has meaning in short that there is one right answer making it real case stories for secondary teachers focuses not on the episodic nature of the standardized test but on those hours and days of contact time that represent the essence of what teachers do on a daily basis within that context teachers are called upon to make hundreds of decisions each day decisions which require knowledge and expertise about planning learner development content knowledge student assessment and ethical practice among many others these decisions are not made easily and cannot be quantified because they take place in the complex world of human nature and human activity where values and priorities conflict and often clash the teachers administrators and students in making it real case stories for secondary teachers represent the day to day situations relationships conflicts and dilemmas that exist in every school no formulas are presented no secrets are revealed rather the authors provide a template for analysis that encourages readers to place themselves in these real life school settings and consider the causes and consequences of their decisions for themselves their students and society as a whole
