theories of intelligence gardner s multiple intelligences there are multiple types of intelligence not measured by traditional intelligence tests defines intelligence as an ability to solve a problem or create a product within a specific cultural setting specified 10 types of intelligence 1 linguistic language skills potentiality large language models llms have dramatically enhanced the field of language intelligence as demonstrably evidenced by their formidable empirical performance across a spectrum of complex reasoning tasks in this study we investigated the hypothesis that intelligence is associated with referential competence conceived as the ability to find words to refer to our subjective and perceptual experience and to evoke understanding of this experience in the listener in the current chapter an effort will be made to explicitly distinguish between the concept of intelligence as a potentiality from intelligence as an actuality and inclusion of non ability constructs especially with respect to the abilities of older adolescents and adults fundamental issues about intelligence is language the key to human intelligence david premack authors info affiliations science
