black gold and blackmail seeks to explain why great powers adopt such different strategies to protect their oil access from politically motivated disruptions in extreme cases such as imperial japan in 1941 great powers fought wars to grab oil territory in anticipation of a potential embargo by the allies in other instances such as germany in the early nazi period states chose relatively subdued measures like oil alliances or domestic policies to conserve oil what accounts for this variation fundamentally it is puzzling that great powers fear oil coercion at all because the global market makes oil sanctions very difficult to enforce rosemary a kelanic argues that two variables determine what strategy a great power will adopt the petroleum deficit which measures how much oil the state produces domestically compared to what it needs for its strategic objectives and disruptibility which estimates the susceptibility of a state s oil imports to military interdiction that is blockade because global markets undercut the effectiveness of oil sanctions blockade is in practice the only true threat to great power oil access that combined with the devastating consequences of oil deprivation to a state s military power explains why states fear oil coercion deeply despite the adaptive functions of the market together these two variables predict a state s coercive vulnerability which determines how willing the state will be to accept the costs and risks attendant on various potential strategies only those great powers with large deficits and highly disruptible imports will adopt the most extreme strategy direct control of oil through territorial conquest

it is estimated that americans consume more than 25 percent of the world s oil but have control over less than 3 percent of its proven supply this extremely unbalanced pattern of consumption makes it possible for foreign governments corrupt political leaders terrorist organizations and oil conglomerates to place the citizens of the united states in a stranglehold of supply and demand there is no greater proof of this than the direct relationship between skyrocketing gas prices and the exploding wealth of those who control the supply of oil in black gold stranglehold jerome r corse and craig r smith expose the fraudulent science that has been sold to the american people in order to enslave them the belief that oil is a fossil fuel and a finite resource on the contrary this book presents authoritative research currently known mostly in the scientific community that oil is not a product of decaying dinosaurs and prehistoric forests rather it is a natural product of the earth the scientific evidence cited by corse and smith suggests that oil is constantly being produced by the earth far below the planet s surface and that it is brought to attainable depths by the centrifugal forces of the earth s rotation in great detail corse and smith explore the international and domestic politics of oil production and consumption this includes the wealth and power of major oil conglomerates the manipulation of world economies by oil producing states and rogue terrorist regimes and the political agenda of radical environmentalists and conservationists who obstruct the use of oil reserves currently controlled by the u s government the authors offer an understanding of the dangerous situation america faces because its currency is no longer tied to any precious and truly scarce metals such as gold as it was until 1973 this situation could easily lead to the devastation of the u s economy if middle eastern countries are able to enact current plans to accept only the euro or gold backed currencies such as the gold dinar instead of the u s dollar as the standard currency for oil black gold stranglehold will dramatically change the debate about oil the significance of its message is sure to cause thoughtful people to reconsider the current dependence of the u s economy on imported oil
