a genuine democracy movement lives in burma but it continues to be brutally suppressed by the ruling military government in 1990 the national league for democracy nld led by aung san suu kyi won 82 percent of the seats in a multiparty parliamentary election the regime ignored the elections and the democratically elected representatives never took office aung san suu kyi who was imprisoned after violent government orchestrated attacks on democracy supporters on may 30 2003 has spent more than half of the past fourteen years under house arrest burma remains one of the most tightly controlled dictatorships in the world recognizing that democracy and the nld cannot survive in burma without the help of the united states and the international community the council sponsored independent task force on burma sounds a clarion call for change in response to the governments recent crackdown on the democratic opposition the task force urges the united nations to call for the immediate release of aung san suu kyi and all political prisoners and to impose sanctions on burma including bans both on new investment in burma and on the importation of goods produced in burma the task force report also offers specific recommendations for u s policy in four areas humanitarian assistance promoting democracy human rights and the rule of law narcotics control policy and refugees migrants and internally displaced persons led by mathea falco president of drug strategies and former assistant secretary of state for international narcotics matters this bipartisan task force comprises members with a wide range of experience in international business law government media academia publichealth and human rights advocacy among other areas its recommendations are intended to inform u s government action as well as to increase u s cooperation with other countries especially in asia to bring about a long overdue political economic and social transformation of burma

History of Anglo-Thai Relations 1970

for over sixty years conflict between state forces and armed ethnic groups was ongoing in parts of the borderlands of burma ethnic minority communities were subjected to systematic and widespread abuses by an increasingly complex patchwork of armed state and non state actors populations in more remote and disputed border areas typically had little to no access to even basic healthcare and education services as part of its counter insurgency campaign the military state also historically restricted international humanitarian access to civilian populations in unstable border areas it was in this context that cross border aid to burma had developed as an alternative mechanism for channelling assistance to populations denied aid through more conventional systems yet by the late 2000s national and international changes had significant impacts on an aid debate which had important political and ethical implications through an ethnographic study of a cross border aid organisation working on the thailand burma border this book focuses on the political and ethical dilemmas of humanitarian government it explores the ways in which aid systems come to be defined as legitimate or illegitimate humanitarian or un humanitarian in an international context that has witnessed the multiplication of often conflicting humanitarian systems and models it examines how an embodied history of violence can shape the worldviews and actions of local humanitarian actors as well as institutions created to mitigate human suffering it goes on to look at the complex and often invisible webs of local organisations international ngos donors armed groups and other actors which can develop in a cross border and extra legal context a context where competing constructions of systems as legitimate or illegitimate are highlighted exploring the history of humanitarianism from the local aid perspective of burma this book will be of interest to students and scholars of southeast asian studies anthropology of humanitarian aid and development studies
