a literary history of our most influential book of all time by an oxford scholar and anglican priest in our culture the bible is monolithic it is a collection of books that has been unchanged and unchallenged since the earliest days of the christian church the idea of the bible as holy scripture a non negotiable authority straight from god has prevailed in western society for some time and while it provides a firm foundation for centuries of christian teaching it denies the depth variety and richness of this fascinating text in a history of the bible john barton argues that the bible is not a prescription to a complete fixed religious system but rather a product of a long and intriguing process which has inspired judaism and christianity but still does not describe the whole of either religion barton shows how the bible is indeed an important source of religious insight for jews and christians alike yet argues that it must be read in its historical context from its beginnings in myth and folklore to its many interpretations throughout the centuries it is a book full of narratives laws proverbs prophecies poems and letters each with their own character and origin stories barton explains how and by whom these disparate pieces were written how they were canonized and which ones weren't and how they were assembled disseminated and interpreted around the world and importantly to what effect ultimately a history of the bible argues that a thorough understanding of the history and context of its writing encourages religious communities to move away from the bible's literal wording which is impossible to determine and focus instead on the broader meanings of scripture what type of old testament text did matthew use as editor of his gospel on the one hand the editorially inserted fulfilment quotations with their peculiar textual form may be expected to represent matthew s biblical text on the other hand the remaining ot quotations are mainly septuagintal and it is often assumed that matthew reinforced the septuagintal character of the quotations which he found in his sources in the first part of this study the fulfilment quotations are examined their textual form is best explained as a septuagint text that was revised to make it better agree with the hebrew and to improve the quality of its greek the evangelist took these quotations from a continuous text in the second part matthew s remaining ot quotations are investigated if matthew borrows quotations from his sources he does not adjust them to the lxx but he simply copies them or edits them in his usual way if he inserts quotations into his sources he makes use of his revised septuagint on the whole this revised septuagint seems to have been matthew s bible
