the state as cultural practice offers a fully worked out account of the authors distinctive interpretive approach to political science it challenges the new institutionalism probably the most significant present day strand in both american and british political science it moves away from such notions as bringing the state back in path dependency and modernist empiricism instead bevir and rhodes argue for an anti foundational analysis ethnographic and historical methods and a decentred approach that rejects any essentialist definition of the state and espouses the idea of politics as cultural practice the book has three aims to develop an anti foundational theory of the state to develop a new research agenda around the topics of rule rationalities and resistance by exploring empirical shifts and debates about the changing nature of the state to show how anti foundational theory leads us to see them differently bevir and rhodes argue for the idea of the stateless state or the state as meaning in action so the state is neither monolithic nor a causal agent it consists solely of the contingent actions of specific individuals of diverse beliefs about the public sphere about authority and power which are constructed differently in contending traditions continuity and change are products of people inheriting traditions and modifying them in response to dilemmas a decentred approach explores the limits to the state and seeks to develop a more diverse view of state authority and its exercise in short political scientists need to bring people back in to the study of the state
