in this collection of natural history essays biologist joan malooof embarks on a series of lively fact filled expeditions into forests of the eastern united states through malooof s engaging conversational style each essay offers a lesson in stewardship as it explores the interwoven connections between a tree species and the animals and insects whose lives depend on it and who in turn work to ensure the tree s survival never really at home in a laboratory malooof took to the woods early in her career her enthusiasm for firsthand observation in the wild spills over into her writing whether the subject is the composition of forest air the eagle s preference for nesting in loblolly pines the growth rings of the bald cypress or the gray squirrel s fondness for weevil infested acorns with a storyteller s instinct for intriguing particulars malooof expands our notions about what a tree is through her many asides about the six species of leafhoppers who eat only sycamore leaves or the midges who live inside holly berries and somehow prevent them from turning red as a scientist malooof accepts that trees have a spiritual dimension that cannot be quantified as an unrepentant tree hugger she finds support in the scientific case for biodiversity as an activist she can t help but wonder how much time is left for our forests canadian botanist biochemist and visionary diana beresford kroeger's startling insights into the hidden life of trees have already sparked a quiet revolution in how we understand our relationship to forests now in a captivating account of how her life led her to these illuminating and crucial ideas she shows us how forests can not only heal us but save the planet when diana beresford kroeger whose father was a member of the anglo irish aristocracy and whose mother was an o donoghue one of the stronghold families who carried on the ancient celtic traditions was orphaned as a child she could have been sent to the magdalene laundries instead the o donoghue elders most of them scholars and freehold farmers in the lisheens valley in county cork took her under their wing diana became the last ward under the brehon law over the course of three summers she was taught the ways of the celtic triad of mind body and soul this included the philosophy of healing the laws of the trees brehon wisdom and the ogham alphabet all of it rooted in a vision of nature that saw trees and forests as fundamental to human survival and spirituality already a precociously gifted scholar diana found that her grounding in the ancient ways led her to fresh scientific concepts out of that huge and holistic vision have come the observations that put her at the forefront of her field the discovery of mother trees at the heart of a forest the fact that trees are a living library have a chemical language and communicate in a quantum world the major idea that trees heal living creatures through the aerosols they release and that they carry a great wealth of natural antibiotics and other healing substances and perhaps most significantly that planting trees can actively regulate the atmosphere and the oceans and even stabilize our climate this book is not only the story of a remarkable scientist and her ideas it harvests all of her powerful knowledge about why trees matter and why trees are a viable achievable solution to climate change diana eloquently shows us that if we can understand the intricate ways in which the health and welfare of every living creature is connected to the global forest and strengthen those connections we will still have time to mend the self destructive ways that are leading to drastic fires droughts and floods they moved along in the bobbing springy gait of a family that followed the woods as some families follow the sea in that first sentence conrad richter sets the mood of this magnificent epic of the american wilderness toward the close of the eighteenth century the land west of the alleghenies and north of the ohio river was an unbroken sea of trees beneath them the forest trails were dark silent and lonely brightened only by a few lost beams of sunlight here the lucketts a wild woodsfaring family lived their roaming life pushing ever westward as the frontier advanced and as new settlements threatened their isolation richter has written not a historical novel of which there are so many but a novel of authentic early american life of which there are so few it is the primitive story of worth luke the hunter and of jary his woman of genny wyitt achsa and sulie their woods wild children of the bound boy and the solitary and jake tench but principally of the oldest girl sayward luke whos people as far back as she knew had always been hunters and gunsmiths to hunters but who through the quiet growing and yet tragic oppression of the trees turns her back at last on her life as a hunter s child and becomes a tiller of the soil this novel of great lyrical beauty and high excitement tells the story of the transition of american pioneers from the ways of the wilderness to the ways of civilization here is the true american epic here is the raw adventure swift and cruel in its episodes but here too is the poetry of loneliness here is a portrait of frontier life as it really must have seemed to the pioneers here in short is a masterpiece by the man who gave us the sea of grass
