Arabic Language and Culture Amid the Demands of Globalization

2007-07-31

as with any other tongue the arabic language influences the way arabic speakers see judge and relate to the world it affects the very nature of their perceptions and judgments and hence constitutes an integral part of a person s character and identity as an individual and more importantly as a member of a group and a society languages reflect indeed measure the strengths and weaknesses of civilizations as they embody the progress the innovations and the coherence of these civilizations the islamic world s encounters with other civilizations particularly the greek civilization presented major challenges to the intellectual evolution of islam at the very early stages of its development as a culture in the current era of globalization as in the past the arabic language and culture have been deluged by a tremendous influx of new terminology and concepts as cross cultural encounters have increased globally due to astonishing developments in information technology and the fast pace with which information and knowledge are transferred to the rest of the world the need for linguistic adjustments in arabic is still on the rise in order to convey scientific discoveries as well as economic and social ideas promulgated by non arab nations the arabic term for globalization al cawlama was coined about two decades ago specifically to describe the impact of the new wave of socio political and economic ideas as well as revolutionary developments in the field of telecommunications and electronics the crushing defeat of the arab armies by israel in 1967 and the occupation of arab lands as a result of this war the defeat of the iraqi army by the coalition forces in 1991 us reactions to the 9 11 attacks the us led war on afghanistan the more recent occupation of iraq and perhaps above all the continued occupation of palestinian lands by israel have contributed to fears and concerns among arabs indeed faced with unprecedented political economic military and cultural reverses the arab and islamic worlds find themselves forced into ever deeper levels of introspection about their society and culture it is hardly surprising that the arab world seeks to reject globalization based on geopolitical and cultural domination and continues to insist upon an alternative approach based on mutual respect two way exchange tathāquf rather than cawlama and the right to selectively adopt innovation the west would do well to recognize that their best chance of gaining support for globalization from the arabs and likely from the rest of the third world lies in seeking true partners in the endeavor respecting the uniqueness of their partners cultures and societies and ensuring that a mutual exchange with western culture and society is perceived as something worth embarking upon rather than as something to fear

Arab Media

2013-05-20

this book provides a clear and authoritative introduction to the emerging arab media industries in the context of globalization and its impacts with a focus on publishing press broadcasting cinema and new media through detailed discussions of the regulation and economics of these industries the authors argue that the political technological and cultural changes on the global media scene have resulted in the reorganization of the arab media field they provide striking examples of this through the particular effects on media policies media technology and the content and genres developed for the new generation of media consumers as part of the book s overview of the contemporary characteristics of arab media the authors outline the development of the role of modern arab media from a tool of mobilizing the public to a tool of commercial and symbolic profit overall the volume illustrates how the arab region represents a unique case where the commercialization and liberalization of selected media industries has gone hand in hand with continuous state intervention and an increasing self censorship written for students without prior knowledge of the topic arab media will be essential reading for all interested in the contemporary global media industries

The Arab State and Neo-Liberal Globalization

now available in paperback this collection of essays offers an alternative approach to the study of today s arab states by focusing on their participation in neo liberal globalization rather than on authoritarianism or islam the effects of the restructuring of traditional state power engendered by globalization are analyzed separately through updated empirical research into the political economic and security processes of each country considered egypt lebanon morocco and saudi arabia are the case studies selected to represent different paths towards a shared model of a new arab state which far from representing an exceptional case of resilience against global trends may be seen in many instances as typifying their effects the book offers both an overall conceptualization of change affecting the arab states domestically and internationally and a series of in depth case studies by country and functional areas it is extremely timely when viewed within the context of the current political unrest and unprecedented change within the middle east this paperback edition includes a new preface which links the author s research to the current arab spring crisis seminar paper from the year 2005 in the subject history asia grade 1 7 university of erfurt course globalisation and the muslim world 7 entries in the bibliography language english abstract the focus of this paper is the media system of the arab world its development and the local and global factors that have had considerable influence during the last years different theories question the importance of communication and media for globalisation and vice versa therefore the existence of a global communication network or global media and the participation of the arab world in the global media evolution is observed in the last fifty years print media television and internet have proven to be important agents of social change even if their development has always been accompanied by censorship arrangements in the different political systems of the region the arab world has not been isolated from global changes in the media sector mass media especially the internet and their importance for global economy are seen as motor of globalization but capital and technology are expanding faster than the development of trans cultural communication is able to this displacement in the action reaction chain can be observed in the way global content and media are domesticised transformed controlled and rejected in the arab countries and how important topics like cultural imperialism indigenous values international norms of journalism and freedom of speech are discussed and negotiated in these societies

Globalisation and Media in the Arab World over recent decades we have witnessed the globalization of research however this has yet to translate into a worldwide scientific network across which competencies and resources can flow freely arab countries have strived to join this globalized world and become a knowledge economy yet little time has been invested in the region s fragmented scientific institutions institutions that should provide opportunities for individuals to step out on the global stage knowledge production in the arab world investigates research practices in the arab world using multiple case studies from the region with particular focus on lebanon and jordan it depicts the janus like face of arab research poised between the negative and the positive and faced with two potentially opposing strands local relevance alongside its internationalization the book critically assesses the role and dynamics of research and poses questions that are crucial to further our understanding of the very particular case of knowledge production in the arab region the book explores research s relevance and whom it serves as well as the methodological flaws behind academic rankings and the meaning and application of key concepts such as knowledge society economy providing a detailed and comprehensive examination of knowledge production in the arab world this book is of interest to students scholars and policy makers working on the issues of research practices and status of science in contemporary developing countries middle east politics have been proverbial for their changeability the 1970s ushered in petro politics for instance but opec s international status declined markedly in the following decade similarly the arab world s ostracism of egypt in the 1970s following its separate peace with israel was turned around in the 1980s the late 1980s also brought plo acceptance of the state of israel interstate relations were not the only arena to experience significant alterations state society relations also underwent dramatic changes such as the acceleration of privatization in erstwhile socialist regimes then the 1990s opened with a political earthquake the gulf crisis the second edition of this highly acclaimed text offers a penetrating analysis of trends in arab foreign policies since the book was originally published in 1984 including an early analysis of the effects of iraq s invasion of kuwait and the subsequent coalition victory over iraq in addition the authors have included new chapters on jordan at the heart of the arab world and on the sudan the region s link to sub saharan africa their inclusion allows a fuller understanding of the foreign policies of states that occupy crucial geopolitical positions but wield little tangible power moreover in many of its chapters the book raises the crucial question of how the foreign policies of these countries can cope with the prevalence of political change the book examines the growing tension between social movements that embrace egalitarian and inclusivist views of national and global politics most notably classical liberalism and those that advance social hierarchy and national exclusivism such as neoliberalism neoconservatism and national populism in exploring issues relating to tensions and conflicts around globalization the book identifies historical patterns of convergence and divergence rooted in the monotheistic traditions beginning with the ancient israelites that dominated the near east during the axial age through islamic civilization and finally by considering the idealism realism tensions in modern times one thing remained constant throughout the various historical stages that preceded our current moment of global convergence a recurring tension between transcendental idealism and various forms of realism transcendental idealism which prioritize egalitarian and universal values pushed periodically against the forces of realism that privilege established law and power structure equipped with the idealism realism framework the book examines the consequences of european realism that justified the imperialistic venture into africa the middle east and latin america in the name of liberation and liberalization the ill conceived strategy has ironically engendered the very dysfunctional societies that produce the waves of immigrants in constant motion from the south to the north simultaneously as it fostered the social hierarchy that transfer external tensions into identity politics within the countries of the north the book focuses particularly on the role played historically by islamic rationalism in translating the monotheistic egalitarian outlook into the institutions of religious pluralism legislative and legal autonomy and scientific enterprise at the foundation of modern society it concludes by shedding light on the significance of the muslim presence in western cultures as humanity draws slowly but consistently towards what we may come to recognize as the global age the open access version of this book available at taylorfrancis.com/books/e/9781003203360 has been made available under a creative commons attribution non commercial no derivatives 4 0 license in our knowledge based world the societies that prosper are the ones that generate knowledge through research through the interwoven relationship between the academe and funded research bodies and with industry they are the new centre it is strange indeed to think of the countries of the arab gulf states as the periphery but as the authors of this book argue very persuasively by importing a baroque arsenal of increasingly sophisticated and costly educational programmes the arab gulf states consume other countries knowledge and products all of which are of declining utility and sustainability whilst universities contribute to the culture and political life of modern society the authors ask where in the arab gulf states is there capacity building knowledge generation and the culture of imaginative ideas that lie at the root of any civilisation by following a magistracy on a global journey through regions nations and into institutions their answers are intended to inform and to urge the arab gulf region into promoting education for its own self determination and even its survival
