Italy remains an enigma for many observers recent social trends in Italy 1960 1995 the sixth volume from the international comparative charting of social change program provides a new and convincing schema for its comprehension it shows that three essential institutions have structured and unified Italian society the family the church and political parties while the state remains a weak institution it is important as a regulator of the economy and of society through the welfare state the book which contains a long introduction by Alberto Martinelli on the uneven modernization of Italy shows the usefulness of analysing social change through study of a series of macro social trends these trends range from life style structures to fertility leisure consumption inequality religion and family among others this sixth national profile provides more arguments in favour of a hypothesis of diversification rather than convergence of modern societies as Henri Mendras writes in the preface of the book the more we change the more we remain ourselves that is the conclusion of our comparative research and the Italian study provides further ample proof of it austerity has become the new principle for public policy in europe and the us as the financial crisis of 2008 has been converted into a public debt crisis however current austerity measures risk losing past progress towards gender equality by undermining important employment and social welfare protections and putting gender equality policy onto the back burner this volume constitutes the first attempt to identify how the economic crisis and the subsequent austerity policies are affecting women in europe and the us tracing the consequences for gender equality in employment and welfare systems in nine case studies from countries facing the most severe adjustment problems the contributions adopt a common framework to analyse women in recession which takes into account changes in women s position and current austerity conditions the findings demonstrate that in the immediate aftermath of the financial crisis employment gaps between women and men declined but due only to a deterioration in men s employment position rather than any improvements for women tables are set to be turned by the austerity policies which are already having a more negative impact on demand for female labour and on access to services which support working mothers women are nevertheless reinforcing their commitment to paid work even at this time of increasing demands on their unpaid domestic labour future prospects are bleak current policy is reinforcing the same failed mechanisms that caused the crisis in the first place and is stalling or even reversing the long term growth in social investment in support for care this book makes the case for gender equality to be placed at the centre of any progressive plan for a route out of the crisis at the risk of sounding frivolous there is a good case to be made for the argument that women constitute the revolutionary force behind contemporary social and economic transformation it is in large part the changing role of women that explains the new household structure our altered demographic behaviour the growth of the service economy and as a consequence the new dilemmas that the advanced societies face most european countries have failed to adapt adequately to the novel challenges and the result is an increasingly serious disequilibrium women explicitly desire economic independence and the societal collective too needs to maximise female employment and yet this runs up against severe incompatibility problems that then result in very low birth rates our aging societies need more kids yet fertility levels are often only half of what citizens define as their desired number of children no matter what happens in the next decade we are doomed to have exceedingly small cohorts that in turn must shoulder the massive burden of supporting a retired baby boom generation hence it is tantamount that tomorrow's adults be maximally productive and yet the typical eu member state invests very little in its children and families the korean constitutional court adopted a two prong test in its first case on dissolution of political party in determining whether to dissolve the political party according to article 8 section 4 of the korean constitution a political party may be dissolved if the purposes or activities of the political party are contrary to the fundamental democratic order the korean constitutional court not only used article 8 4 of the constitution as a standard of review for dissolution of political party but also adopted the principle of proportionality as another standard of review to be met even though the constitution does not explicitly say so the european court of human rights has also used essentially a two step test where the dissolution of a political party is justified if there is a pressing social need for the dissolution and the dissolution is proportionate to the legitimate aims pursued in principle the criteria established by the korean constitutional court is very similar to the ones developed by the european court of human rights even though the outcome of the application seems to be somewhat different
