since its establishment in 1930 the irish military college has had a vital influence on not only the defence forces but on the nation it has formed all of the nation s commissioned officers many of whom have achieved distinction both within and outside of the defence forces the story of this relatively unknown national institution is intriguing as it has attempted to fulfill the roles laid down for it in 1923 in training and instructing officers and officer candidates the task has not been easy as the military college has inevitably been subject to the many changes and fluctuations in the duties roles and fortunes of the wider defence forces in this book colonel tom hodson a former instructor in the military college and a graduate of École de guerre paris charts its history he recounts how from its early predecessor the army school of instruction the military college has repeatedly re invented itself culminating in the requirement for today s modern institution to embrace and impart instruction based on the needs of the irish defence forces and the procedures of european and nato armies the uk spends approximately 20bn annually on military goods and services around two thirds of the total defence budget the challenges are constantly evolving and there has been a succession of reforms to the acquisition process each building on the last and between them delivering significant improvement more recent equipment projects show less tendency towards cost growth and time slippage there is a more holistic throughlife approach to providing capability chapter 5 and a stronger and more mutually beneficial relationship with industry chapter 6 around 98 per cent of major projects deliver the operational performance needed at the front line but they also tend to increase in cost by an average of 2.8 per cent each year and to suffer delay averaging 5.9 months more projects must be delivered to cost and time an independent report into defence acquisition by bernard gray available at mod.uk/news-and-features/only-yes/78821960 14a0429ea90afa2a8c292c840reviewacquisitiongrayreport.pdf concluded that overall plans for new equipment were too ambitious and needed to be scaled down to match the funding likely to be available and management of equipment portfolios must be improved this strategy is built around those conclusions the framework is designed so that the ministry of defence will make better decisions about what equipment and wider services to buy how to ensure they are delivered on time to cost and provide the desired performance and in doing so recognise and properly manage all the other strands training personnel information doctrine organisation infrastructure and logistics needed to deliver and sustain effect on the ground
