Cavalcade 1998 may sinclair was a bestselling author of her day whose versatile literary output including criticism philosophy poetry psychoanalysis and experimental fiction now frequently falls between the established categories of literary modernism in terms of her contribution to dominant modernist paradigms she was until recently best remembered for recasting the psychological novel as stream of consciousness narrative in a 1918 review of Dorothy Richardson's Pilgrimage this book brings together the most recent research on Sinclair and re-contextualises her work both within and against dominant modernist narratives it explores Sinclair's negotiations between the public and private the cerebral and the corporeal and the spiritual and the profane in both her fiction and non-fiction

Annual Report of the State Auditor, Made to the General Assembly 1918 this collection builds on previous works on gender violence in the Pacific but goes beyond some previous approaches to domestic violence or violence against women in analysing the dynamic processes of engendering violence in PNG engendering refers not just to the sex of individual actors but to gender as a crucial relation in collective life and the massive social transformations ongoing in PNG conversion to Christianity the development of extractive industries the implanting of introduced models of justice and the law and the spread of HIV hence the collection examines issues of troubled masculinities as much as battered women and tries to move beyond the black and white binaries of blaming either tradition or modernity as the primary cause of gender violence it relates original scholarly research in the villages and towns of PNG to questions of policy and practice and reveals the complexities and contestations in the local translation of concepts of human rights it will interest undergraduate and graduate students in gender studies and Pacific studies and those working on the policy and practice of combating gender violence in PNG and elsewhere

Annual Report 1918 human beings are social animals yet despite vast amounts of research into political decision making very little attention has been devoted to its social dimensions in political science social relationships are generally thought of as mere sources of information rather than active influences on one's political decisions drawing upon data from settings as diverse as South Los Angeles and Chicago's wealthy North Shore Betsy Sinclair shows that social networks do not merely inform citizen's behavior they can and do have the power to change it from the decision to donate money to a campaign or vote for a particular candidate to declaring oneself a Democrat or Republican basic political acts are surprisingly subject to social pressures when members of a social network express a particular political opinion or belief Sinclair shows others notice and conform particularly if their conformity is likely to be highly visible we are not just social animals but social citizens whose political choices are significantly shaped by peer influence the social citizen has important implications for our concept of democratic participation and will force political scientists to revise their notion of voters as socially isolated decision makers

The University of Texas Publication 1950 this book explores sacrifice as a narrative theme and a stylistic strategy in works by may sinclair mary butts and h d it argues that the modernist experiment with pronoun use informs the treatment of acts of sacrifice in the texts understood both as acts of self renunciation and as ritual performance it also suggests that sacrifice if the conditions are right can serve as the structure upon which a cohesive community might be built the book offers in depth analyses of the three authors and their works deftly dissecting the modernist narrative experiment to show that it was by no means limited it was a means by which to approach a wide range of stories and materials
