pragma dialectics or pragma dialectical theory developed by Frans H van Eemeren and Rob Grootendorst at the University of Amsterdam is an argumentation theory that is used to analyze and evaluate argumentation in actual practice. This chapter discusses the pragma dialectical approach developed in the Netherlands by van Eemeren and Grootendorst between the 1970s and the late 1990s and extended by van Eemeren and Houtlosser at the end of the twentieth and the beginning of the twenty-first century. In the last section of this chapter, the author overviews the various approaches that give shape to the dialectical and the rhetorical perspectives on argumentation, both of which are functionally integrated into the pragma dialectical approach to argumentation.

pragma dialectical approach to argumentative discourse that Rob Grootendorst and Frans H van Eemeren jointly developed over the past thirty years. It provides a sketch of our contribution to the study of argumentation by describing our approach to a number of issues that are crucial to the development of a comprehensive theory of the pragma dialectical approach.

The pragma dialectical approach to circularity in argumentation. In this contribution, we start by giving a critical survey of various approaches to question-begging arguments, which leads to three desiderata for such theories. Next, we examine how question-begging. This article discusses the pragma dialectical approach developed in the Netherlands by van Eemeren and Grootendorst between the 1970s and the late 1990s. After a sketch of the normative pragmatic research carried out in pragma dialectics, the metatheoretical starting points are discussed. The pragma dialectical approach to fallacies.
