in august 1955 two men fought on the corner of frith street and old compton street soho from the dreadful injuries they inflicted on each other it easily could have been a hanging matter but ironically it became known as the fight that never was it was however to have enormous repercussions in the battle for control of soho and its clubs and for the bookmakers pitches on the racecourses it also led to the inexorable rise of the kray twins one of the men fighting was jack spot the self proclaimed defender of the jewish community against fascism the other was the half italian albert dimes the right hand man of spot s one time friend and later nemesis billy hill rightly described as the nearest britain has ever had to a mastermind meticulously researched including interviews with the survivors of the era this is the story of the rise and fall of spot from an east end background and hill from a criminal family in holborn as well as that of their spiritual mentor darby sabini the king of the racecourses in the 1920s and 1930s and his successors alf and harry white
