plantations arose primarily in areas where forests had been cleared by the royal navy which maintained an interest in management and conservation for the shipbuilding industry the sugar planters won a decisive victory in 1815 however when they were allowed to clear extensive forests without restriction for cane fields and sugar production this book is the first to consider cuba s vital sugar eating birds lizards and toads as agents of biological control in the late 19th century sugar cane scientists carried cane toads from barbados to puerto rico to hawaii and then queensland to control pests toads were introduced to some 138 countries and are now ranked among the world's most invasive species queensland's sugar scientists released the toad into cane fields in 1935 they were supported by cane growers politicians the nation's leading scientists the premier of queensland and the prime minister of australia only a lone voice objected in the following 70 years they spread as far as western nsw and western australia this story is about good intentions unintended consequences and of simple acts leading to catastrophic outcomes it is about scientists so committed to solving a problem serving their country their leaders and the industry that employed them that they are blinkered to adverse impacts there are lessons to learn from the toad's tale and as the tale shows we still come perilously close to repeating the mistakes of the past from king cane to the last sugar mill focuses on the technological and scientific advances that allowed hawaii's sugar industry to become a world leader and hawaiian commercial sugar company hcs to survive into the twenty first century the authors both agricultural scientists offer a detailed history of the industry and its contributions balanced with discussion of the enormous societal and environmental changes due to its aggressive search for labor land and water sugarcane cultivation in hawaii began with the arrival of polynesian settlers expanded into a commercial crop in the mid 1800s and became a significant economic and political force by the end of the nineteenth century hawaii's sugar industry entered the twentieth century heralding major improvements in sugarcane varieties irrigation systems fertilizer use biological pest control and the use of steam power for field and factory operations by the 1920s the industry was among the most technologically advanced in the world its expansion however was not without challenges hawaii's annexation by the united states in 1898 invalidated the kingdom's contract labor laws reduced the plantations hold on labor and resulted in successful strikes by japanese and filipino workers the industry survived the low sugar prices of the great depression and labor shortages of world war ii by mechanizing to increase productivity the 1950s and 1960s saw science driven gains in output and profitability but the following decades brought unprecedented economic pressures that reduced the number of plantations from twenty seven in 1970 to only four in 2000 by 2011 only one plantation remained hawaii's last surviving sugar mill hcs with its large size excellent water resources and efficient irrigation and automated systems remained generally profitable into the 2000s severe drought conditions however caused substantial operating losses in 2008 and 2009 though profits rebounded local interest groups have mounted legal challenges to hcs's historic water rights and the public health effects of preharvest burning while the company has experimented with alternative harvesting methods to lessen environmental impacts hcs has yet to find those to be economically viable as a result the future of the last sugar company in hawaii remains uncertain
